This is an important consideration affecting the personal convenience of every citizen using the cars in had weather.

Grayson & Cain, of Fourteenth Street,

'Probably no one approaching a car line from a side street and desiring to ride failed to experience the inconvenrecently settled in favor of the far-side rule, after a fair trial of the near-side atop, seems to have been undertaken with the mistaken idea that the recent deplorable because it is not improved. In reporting upon the request, C. B. Hunt, the Computing Engineer, stated that the policy of the Commissioners has been to add no new streets to the schedule until such time as it has been reduced by the yearly operations to a more must convince any cassio man that such If seems to me that one moment's thought must convince any case of man that such was not the case. That car, it is understood, made no stop at the street where accident bappened, and so its speed and position at the moment of the accident were entirely unaffected by the rightation and would have been as it was whichever rule had been in force. I submit that so far as such accidents, fortunately rare, are preventable, the accord of the reasons given above in favor of the far-side rule. shows that a larger degree of security against a repetition exists with the pres-cut regulation than can be recured by a acturn to the norr side rule, so recently which I believe can be traced to the unnecessary and almost constant noises under the front windows of our city houses. Scissors grinders and umbrella menders, even one or two delivery wagons, carry bells from five to eight inches in diameter, hang upon a wire or soring, making the bell ring constantly.

"I have known two of these bells to be in our block at the same time, and a huckuter shouting betries in stentorian tones. These scissors grinders and huck-ones. These scissors grinders and huckwaken everybody in the frunt of the house just one hour earlier than they want to be. These bells are a muisance so great that I wonder it has existed so long where progressive people live.

"I wrote Major Sylvester about it a year ago, but there has not been, apparently, a sound less. These bells can easily be heard for two blocks and are calculated to make even phleamatic women nervous wreeks. Consider the effect upon women who sit at their open front windows and sew Irom morning until evening as a means of livelihood. I really believe that if the Commissioners will look into the matter, they will have these noises stopped, at least the bells, for they are the worst nuisance."
